History chronicles state's church music

By Tony Martin
Associate Editor

Sharing the Song of Jesus: A Celebration of 60 Years of the Church Music Department of the Mississippi Baptist Convention, might be considered a labor of love on many levels. As Graham Smith, director of the Church Music Department of the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board (MBCB) states in the forward to the book, "I believe that at intervals it is important to take a practical look backwards, reassess our beginnings and remember our past in order to plan more effectively for the future." The book, written by L. Lavon Gray, minister of music at First Church, Jackson, is a testament to those faithful music leaders in Mississippi Baptist churches.

"About 2001, as I began to think about our 60th anniversary, I wanted to do something lasting," said Smith. "I wanted to do something for our heritage. We are living in such crucial days in church music in Mississippi and the convention, I thought it was necessary for folks to see how church music came about. I knew Lavon had done his doctoral dissertation for Louisiana Baptists, and I wanted him to do the same story for us. So I felt led that Lavon was the one to write it." The book debuted at the Mississippi Baptist Convention in 2006.

Much of the oral tradition of the musical heritage had been lost. In the mid 1970s, Anne W. McWilliams Morse, then an editorial assistant with The Baptist Record, conducted research on the history of the department, including first-person interviews with family members of Luther Harrison and W.C. Morgan, the first directors of the church music department. "I met her," said Gray, "and by chance and God's blessings, Graham found an old notebook that was a series of papers she had written in rough draft, including these interviews. She'd compiled editorials from the Record, and I don't know what we would've done without these materials."

Gray knew from his project in Louisiana what direction he wanted to take, and Smith encouraged him to tell stories. The primary research came from The Baptist Record, beginning in 1900, and Gray pulled all the editorials and stories about church music. "Mississippi played a vital role in the whole history of church music in the Southern Baptist Convention, because of some of the personalities and people involved," said Gray. "We supplemented that material with information in the church music department, and made four or five trips to the Southern Baptist Historical Archives and Library in Nashville. I had no idea when I accepted the challenge of writing this history that it would span two states, three churches, and five years!" Gray began the project while serving at First Church, McComb, and continued the work while at Taylors Church, Taylors, S.C., and in Jackson.

"For the first time, readers can see how organized church music began for Southern Baptists and Mississippi Baptists," said Smith.

"I tried hard to not make it just factual," said Gray. "I wanted to share it in a story format, so if I could include something about a 50-year-tenured church organist in a church in Copiah County, I'd try to include something about her. There is a lot of emphasis on the people who make up the history of church music in the state, most of whom are nameless."

"We are standing on their shoulders," said Smith, "and so many of them we just don't know. Being a minister of music is a fairly new position. I wanted other musicians in the state to know why were doing, what were doing, other than the fact that were called by God, instead of being just an entertainer."

The church music department has mailed a copy of the book to every Baptist church in Mississippi. Extra copies are available through the church music department for $10 plus $2 shipping. "It wasn't a project to make money," said Smith, "but a project for our heritage and our future. It was our best attempt to bring together in a cohesive state relevant details and personalities God has blessed us with over these years."

Miss. CP sets new record

Gifts to the work of the Lord through the Mississippi Cooperative Program (CP) in January set a new all-time record in the first month of the new fiscal year, according to Jim Futral, executive director-treasurer of the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board in Jackson. The January total of $3,982,875, eclipsed the old mark of $3,501,219, recorded in January 2003. The new record represents a rise of $485,152, or 13.9%, over January 2006 giving of $3,497,723 and $1,550,565, or 63.74%, more than the $2,432,310 given the previous month. The 2007 Mississippi CP budget of $33,188,934 — also a record amount — was approved by messengers to the 2006 annual meeting of the Mississippi Baptist Convention. A total of $2,765,745 is needed each month to meet the convention board's budget for 2007. In addition to helping support more than 10,700 missionaries in the U.S. and around the world through affiliation with the Southern Baptist Convention, Mississippi CP helps fund such activities as the State Baptist Student Union Retreat on February 16-17 at Camp Garaywa in Clinton and the Christian Performing Arts Festival on February 23-24 at Broadmoor Church, Madison.

SBC CP slows in January

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (BP) — Giving to the Southern Baptist Cooperative Program in January was $19,996,592, 2.2%, or $450,810 below the $20,447,401 received in January 2006, according to a news release from SBC Executive Committee President and Chief Executive Officer Morris H. Chapman. However, fiscal year-to-date contributions of $67,348,758 moved ahead of last year's giving pace by 2.24%. (The Southern Baptist Convention fiscal years begins in October.) The $25,230,191 in designated gifts received last month were $2,722,785 below the $27,952,976 received in January 2006, a decrease of 9.74%. For the SBC Cooperative Program Allocation Budget, the fiscal year-to-date total of $67,348,758 is 103% of the $65,316,141 budgeted to support Southern Baptist ministries globally and across North America. The Cooperative Program is Southern Baptists' method of supporting missions and ministry efforts of state and regional conventions and the Southern Baptist Convention. Gifts are given by church members, whose churches retain a portion for their ministries and forward the remainder to state Baptist conventions. Those conventions retain a portion for state programs and activities, and forward the remainder to the Southern Baptist Convention.

The promise, politics of Gardasil

Parents, here's another word you can put on your watch list: Gardasil. It's not really an actual word, though. It's one of those manufactured jumbles that pharmaceutical companies place on new drugs coming to market.

Gardasil is the name of Merck's first-of-its-kind vaccination against certain strains of the human papillomavirus (HPV), which researchers believe are responsible for about 70% of all cervical cancers and 90% of all cases of genital warts. The federal Food and Drug Administration has approved the drug as a vaccine against those diseases, as well as certain other forms of cancer believed to be caused by HPV.

Sexual contact is the primary way HPV spreads, and one recent study concluded that up to 80% of American women may be exposed to the virus before their 50th birthday. Fortunately, the body's defenses usually destroy HPV, but in some women the virus takes hold and helps turn normal cervical cells into a malignancy.

Gardasil appears to be a monumental step forward in the battle against cancer — and several particularly deadly forms of cancer, to be sure — so what could possibly be controversial about the three-shot, $360 regimen that would provide almost 100% protection against certain forms of cervical cancer and genital warts? As usual, politics and money are involved.

Merck, the drug's manufacturer and marketer, recommends administering the drug to all healthy females between the ages of nine and 26, and the younger the better because the vaccine is ineffective once a person has had sex and been infected with HPV. Merck is also studying the application of the vaccine for males who may have been infected and are spreading the disease to girls and young women.

Conservative groups are concerned, however, about administering the vaccine to children at such a young age, and the erroneous conclusions those children may draw about promiscuous sexual behavior. The vaccine does not protect against all forms of cervical cancer, nor does it protect against other sexually-transmitted diseases such as AIDS, syphilis, and gonorrhea.

Not least important, some parents see the oncoming rush to mandate the vaccine for minors as a challenge to their right to make such decisions on behalf of their children.

That's exactly what is happening in Texas right now, and money and politics are playing a large role in the ensuing uproar.

Republican Governor Rick Perry has trashed those parental authority concerns and circumvented the legislative process in that state by issuing an executive order to force all sixth-grade girls to be vaccinated with Gardasil. The executive order also commands state health authorities to make the vaccine available free of charge to uninsured girls or girls whose insurance company will not pay for the shots. Medicaid will also be forced to cover the cost of the shots under Perry's executive order.

Why institute such an unprecedented and desperate executive order instead of going through the Texas Legislature? Apparently, because there's not much support for abrogating parental rights among legislators. Equally apparent is the political pressure Perry is under to boost the drug.

With 18 states considering whether to mandate Gardasil for schoolgirls, the drug's manufacturer Merck is stepping up efforts to get the regimen adopted in as many locales as possible.

"I cannot think of a bigger boost (for sales of the drug)," said Steve Brozak, who analyzes the drug industry for W.B.B. Securities, in a recent Associated Press interview.

Associated Press also reports that Merck doubled its spending on lobbyists in Texas and hired Perry's former chief of staff, now a powerful lobbyist. The push was on for adoption of the vaccine but legislators were reluctant, so Perry issued his executive order to get it done right away. Under Texas law, the Legislature has no power to rescind Perry's order.

Other states have felt the pressure, too. Maryland Senator Delores Kelley recently withdrew her bill to mandate Gardasil for schoolgirls in that state after complaints that there were already too many vaccine requirements. Michigan legislators declined to pass similar legislation after expressing concerns for parental rights and family privacy.

Gardasil may turn out to be a great medical advance, and one that we can all support in the long run — but not at the expense of steamrolling parental rights.

Well-funded and well-connected, the Merck push to adopt Gardasil will probably make its way to Mississippi once the larger states fall into line. Be prepared, and come informed to the debate.

GUEST OPINION:

This year's 'ultimate' game

By Kelly Boggs, editor
Louisiana Baptist Message

ues for tickets were $600-$700. However, many of those in attendance shelled out three to five times the face value. Advertisers spent $2.6 million for a 30-second television commercial. An estimated 140 million watched the game via television.

The consulting firm Challenger, Gray & Christmas Inc., estimates that U.S. companies could suffer lost wages of approximately $820 million as Americans focus on the Super Bowl. The unproductive time includes chatting about the game, planning parties, organizing betting pools, and researching big-screen TVs.

What caused the Super Bowl to go from a football game that many ignored, to the behemoth event that now captivates

America's attention? One contributing factor is America's obsession with entertainment. Make no mistake about it, professional football is entertainment.

The Super Bowl is hyper-hyped as crowning achievement in professional sports. In fact, in many fans' minds a player's career cannot be considered a success unless he triumphs in the "ultimate game."

However, one of the main reasons for the Super Bowl's success lies in the fact that so many Americans live without a sense of purpose. In a life that is void of meaning or purpose, only experience holds any real significance. A person who has no meaning or purpose motivating his or her life seeks to find fulfillment in experiences, so a big event like the Super Bowl becomes an opportunity to share a moment and seek something significant that will add value or a sense of meaning to life.

Sports provide a wonderful outlet for those drifting through life without purpose. There is always the next game or the next season to which to look forward. Some even live vicariously through their favorite players. After this year's Super Bowl many fans will boast, "We won," when the only effort they expended was to walk to the refrigerator for a snack.

On Monday, the "ultimate game" was talked about and individual plays rehashed. However, the only lives that will be richer for experience are the players that participated and the Miami businesses that benefited from Super Bowl spending. Many people will have shared an experience, enjoyed a game, and engaged in a gaudy distraction — but few lives will have been changed.

The Super Bowl is, after all, only a football game. When it is played next year, how many people actually will be able to recall this year's "ultimate game?"

Pastor Scot honored for standing firm

NEW YORK (BP)—Christian leaders from six continents gathered in New York City on January 26 to recognize an Australian pastor who became one of the first people indicted under the country's new "religious vilification" law, which makes public criticism of any religion a hate crime.

Daniel Scot, an Assemblies of God minister from Brisbane, received the Kairos Journal Award for his refusal to "compromise truth for fear of jail." The award is given annually to individuals who demonstrate faithfulness to Scripture and pastoral courage. It also honors those who respond to what the journal calls a "kairos moment," a moment that calls for timely Christian action.

In 2002, Scot found himself a defendant in the courts of Victoria in Australia. Three Muslim converts accused the pastor of vilifying Islam after he had given a series of lectures about the differences between Islam and Christianity. Scot's indictment touched off a four-year legal battle. He was convicted and ordered to apologize to Muslims in a series of advertisements in Melbourne at a potential cost of nearly $50,000.

Scot would not purchase the advertisements and launched an appeal in 2004.

Challenging the teachings of Islam is nothing new for Scot, even if the costs are high. A gifted mathematician, he competed for a teaching position with Muslim scholars at the University of Punjab in Pakistan. The positions were normally reserved for Muslims, but Scot studied Islam, passed an examination about the religion and was named to the faculty.

In 1986, Pakistan's government amended its legal code, making insults against Muhammad a capital crime. Anyone who publicly declared Jesus as the Savior would likely face a quick death. Five senior professors cornered Scot on Christmas Eve, encouraging him to convert to Islam or face losing his teaching post — or worse.

"They said to me, 'This is a golden opportunity for you to convert to Islam,'" Scot told the award dinner audience, "but I said in my heart, 'This is a golden opportunity to share the Gospel with five senior professors.'"

Scot turned the discussion to the issue of salvation, questioning the Muslim professors how they could know if they achieved it. They had no answer, but after the discussion they filed a complaint with the government. The next day, a colleague at the university told Scot, "Your life is in danger. I cannot protect you."

Scot, who was born into a Christian family in 1951, went into hiding, moving from location to location where he was sheltered by friends. He assumed that he was headed for death, but his wife intervened.

"You have this madness to be a martyr for Jesus," his wife told him. "What will happen to your wife and five children?" In 1987, Scot and his family fled to Brisbane, Australia. He began lecturing on mathematics and soon earned a teaching position at the University of Queensland.

In December 2006, the Supreme Court of Victoria overturned the decision of the lower court that had convicted Scot and sent the case back to the Victorian Civil and Administrative Tribunal. The court also ruled that the judge who issued the guilty verdict against Scot could not sit in judgment in any new proceedings.

Justice Geoffrey Nettle said the lower court had erred, misinterpreting honest and comparative discussions of religion for hate speech. It is "essential to keep the distinction between the hatred of beliefs and the hatred of their adherents steadily in view," Nettle noted.

Scot's case tallied a cost of more than $500,000 in legal fees. The high court ruled that the Islamic Council of Victoria must pay half of the cost of the original appeal from 2004. Scot's legal troubles, however, may be far from over as he continues to face opposition from Muslims in Australia.

Leaders issue warnings

NEW YORK (BP) — Much of the church is asleep or in "deep, dark denial" about Islam, Anglican Archbishop Henry Luke Orombi of Uganda said in New York City at the Kairos Journal Award dinner on January 26. "As I look forward into the 21st century, it seems to me the great global conflict will be between Christianity and Islam," the Ugandan leader said, adding that in Uganda, Muslims are attempting to conquer "not so much by the sword but by the dollar." There, Libyan dictator Muammar Gaddafi built a national mosque as a "gift" to the people. Newly discovered oil resources in Uganda are finding their way into Muslim hands, and Muslim financiers are pouring money into the country — despite the fact that only 12% of Uganda's population is Muslim. Muslims also are offering vocal opposition to laws that protect women's rights because, Orombi said, "these are not in the Koran." Mark Durie, vicar of St. Mary's Anglican Church, Caulfield, in Melbourne, Australia, said failure to address Islam with the Gospel will result in falling prey to it. At present, he said, the future of the world is less than certain. "The religious future of India is up for grabs as the Dalits, the lower class, leave Hinduism. China has 90-100 million Christians. Will it be the next great Christian superpower at the end of the 21st century? Europe is gradually sinking under immigration. One in three babies born in France today is Muslim. Will France be a Sharia state with a nuclear bomb in this century?" Baroness Caroline Cox, a conservative member of Britain's House of Lords who has worked to alleviate the persecution of Christians in Muslim lands, said in a videotaped message that the current religious and political climate is similar to the 1930s. "Are we going to be Chamberlains or Churchills?" she asked. "Militant Islam is the greatest threat to our social, political and cultural heritage."

WHAT A WAY TO LIVE

It seems like about every year or every couple of years a study will come out revealing what generally we know already if we observe life at all, and that is people who seem to live life at its best and often live life the longest have a buoyant, upbeat, positive, put-a-smile-on-your-face and go-out-and-meet-the-day attitude. However they are able to accomplish it, they always seem to be able to get up, go out, and travel on the sunny side of the street. That is not easy to do because sometimes it rains all day long. At other times frightening storm clouds roll in like a tidal wave. There is something about some folks that just seems to dispel all the clouds, and rays of sunshine break through any way.

I am always interested in these studies because it is my observation that these are the people who actually make life worth living. They are the ones who can fill a room up with joy and positive vibrations even if they do not speak a word. It seems that they not only live life in gear and engaged but their spirit and influence seems to charge other folks' batteries. It not only raises the level of productivity, but also raises the bar on folks' well-being and self-worth. You just watch, and you will see that there are some folks who will constantly drain you. If you are blessed, you will have opportunity to be around those people who sustain you. I am so thankful and can honestly say that I have met more of these kinds of folks than any other kind.

Of course, we interact with many other types of folks. Some folks pain you and others may stain you. There are those teaching, mentoring types who train you, and there are those special people throughout the journey who may restrain you.

Recently, I had the wonderful privilege of meeting a lady in one of our fine churches who just absolutely exuded excitement about the Lord and a genuine thrill about life. When I met her she was excited to be on her way to teach a Sunday School class. As we talked for a moment what she did not tell me was that she was in the middle of extensive chemotherapy for cancer. As we stood and talked and others joined in the conversation they brought up the subject. It was obvious that the cancer and the treatment had affected her, and had no doubt taken away some of her resistance as her immune system was compromised by the chemotherapy. It had taken most of her hair, but it had not robbed her of her smile, her loving relationships, or her delight in serving the Lord. We visited for a few minutes, she told the group that had gathered that she had to get on to her Sunday School class and to be praying for her as she would be having some more chemo that week, and off she went.

Later, as we went into the worship service it was apparent that at the Sunday School time the lesson, the relationships, and the class experience had all gone well because she was talking to folks and they were thanking her. After a wonderful experience in worship, as people came by she spoke to me and said, "I want to give you something that I think you will really enjoy." I had no idea what she was talking about, but that night when she returned for the evening worship service she handed me an envelope and inside was a typed one sentence statement of life and philosophy. It was a philosophy of life that I had already seen expressed in her exuberance about church, the Lord, friends, and the future. The statement was, "Life should NOT BE a journey to the grave with the intention of arriving safely in an attractive and well preserved body, but rather to skid in sideways with chocolate in one hand, a diet soda in the other, and a body thoroughly used up, and totally worn out for Jesus screaming, 'WOO HOO! WHAT A RIDE!'"

What a statement, what a spirit, what a faith, and what a wonderful understanding of the Word and the wonder that our Lord Jesus brings to our lives when He says, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly" (John 10:10). Probably most of us have the kind of faith that we see ourselves riding gracefully along on a beautiful, gentle, majestic steed only to find ourselves most of the time on the back of a wild, bucking bronco called life. We hold on tightly not because we enjoy it but because we don't want to be splattered on the ground. The options seem to be few and not the ones we would prefer so we try to ride on, but here is where some people have tapped into something different. They do not just see a bigger picture — they see the really big picture which brings into focus the amazing will of God that permits them to interrupt the normal bumps, bruises, and bounces of life in light of eternity and also in light of the fact that God can always bring about good to His children.

These folks seem not to just measure the momentary but rather the eternal, not just the visible circumstances but the invisible Creator, and not just the crisis but also the Christ that transcends all of those moments. It did not matter then nor does it matter now what the situation because when Jesus walks in, it will be different. Things are going to change. He attended a funeral and rather than having a eulogy there was a resurrection. He attended a wedding and rather than a mess of shortsighted planning a miracle broke out. He walked into the middle of a storm where His disciples were afraid, the winds were howling, and suddenly peace fell on the place. He could just be walking down the street in the midst of a crowd and a lady who had been battling ill health and disease for a dozen years would reach out in faith and brush the hem of His garment only to find that her life was changed in a moment.

Is that not wonderful? That is the Jesus we know. That is the Savior we worship. That is why when we gather on Sunday we look around and spot those folks who are singing with a twinkle in their eye. That is why you hear a testimony in the hallway from someone who may be going through the deepest valley and yet the bright and morning star lights his or her pathway. What a way to live!

1 Timothy 2:1-2

(1) Race Reconciliation Emphasis (CARE): Pray for Christians of all races to model the love and grace of God to all races; (2) In January 15, the newly elected president of Ecuador, Rafael Correa, began his first term. Pray for God's will to be done in Ecuador and for the Christians to be strong and to trust in God.

Pray for the wind of God's purifying Spirit to blow throughout our convention and bring a spirit of repentance and revival to our hearts. Pray that each pastor and church member will ask God to do whatever is necessary in their personal lives to mold them into Christlikeness for the praise and glory of God.

(1) wMu Focus on Missions Week, Feb. 12-18; (2) "Pass It On" Youth Ministers and Volunteer Leaders Conference, Central Hills. Pray for youth ministers and leaders to hear God's direction on how to live a Christlike life before their youth and how to teach their youth to do the same before their peers.

Many of the major cities in the Sverdlovskaya Oblast of Russia have no evangelical churches of any kind. Pray for a group from Arkansas making an exploratory trip to one of these cities with the goal of establishing a partnership with a Russian pastor who has been called to plant a church in this city.

(1) "Pass It On" Youth Ministers and Volunteer Leaders Conference, Immanuel BC, Hattiesburg; (2) The Valencia, Venezuela, crusade is this week. Pray that the speakers presenting the Word will be full of the Holy Spirit of God as they preach and for immediate faithful discipleship and follow up on decisions.

There are many Christians from different countries living on the Arabian Peninsula. They work 40 to 60 hours a week in regular jobs, but their hearts desire is to share the truth of God. Pray that they will have opportunities to share their faith with their colleagues and for protection and perseverance.

E is a young man in Brazil who has been visiting the church that meets in J's house. He and his brother were born virtually blind. A. is a Fulani seeking the Truth. He has heard many stories from God's Word and is even sharing them with people in the village. Pray that A. will continue to seek the Truth, will continue to share what he hears, and that ultimately he will trust Christ as his Lord and Savior.

(1) MBCEF Convention, Park Place BC, Brandon (CG); (2) "Pass It On" Youth Ministers and Volunteer Leaders Conference, FB, Tupelo. (1) AMD Interpretation Meeting, Camp Garaywa, February 22-23. Pray for our AMDs to hear God's voice and direction about how to be a catalyst motivating their associations in mission outreaches.

Ask God to reveal Himself to many West Africans who will hear the gospel message this year through the personal testimonies of believers, cassettes, DVDs, radio broadcasts and other means. Pray that seekers will accept the truth about Jesus Christ and have the courage to commit their lives to Him.

G struggles between his commitment to come to Bible study and learn more about being a Christian and his involvement in the political aspect of his nation, St. Lucia. Pray for G as he deals with these two important claims upon his life, asking that he will decide to make Jesus his first priority.

State BSU Retreat, Camp Garaywa, 16th - 17th. Pray for this group of students to be an encouragement to one another to be bold witnesses on their campuses. Pray that they will be fully committed to Jesus Christ in every area of their lives. Pray for the BSU directors to be models of humility and holiness before their students.

Called the most animistic of the Senegalese peoples, the Bassari (population: 9,000) live in the most remote part of southeastern Senegal. The Bassari are in need of an evangelical presence. ## BIBLE STUDIES FOR LIFE

Something You Must Do

John 3:1-8, 13-18

By Gloria Lofton

This week we continue with our study theme: Christianity is Christ. Last week we studied the deity of Jesus Christ in: The Word From God.

In our focal passage, John 3:1-3, we are told of a man named Nicodemus, who was a ruler of the Jews, which means he was a member of the Sanhedrin. The Sanhedrin was the supreme council of the Jews in the time of Christ and earlier. In the New Testament it is usually referred to simply as "the council." The power and influence of the Sanhedrin were greatest during the period of Roman rule in Palestine, and it served as a major instrument of justice among the Jews, handling all matters pertaining to the Jewish Law and many criminal matters.

Nicodemus was very intelligent and deeply religious. Nicodemus wanted to know more, so he went to Jesus by night because he was afraid to seek Him openly. Even though Nicodemus was a deeply religious person, he was still in darkness about truths of God, and out of that darkness he came to the Light. (v. 2, KJV) The phrase "cannot see the kingdom of God" should be understood as cannot enter.

In verse 3, Jesus told Nicodemus, except a man be born again, he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven. (KJV) "Nicodemus saith unto Him, 'How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter a second time into his mother's womb and be born?" (v. 4, KJV) The grammatical structure of this question expects a negative answer. "Jesus answered; verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man is born of water and of the spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (v. 5, KJV) Verse 6 tells us, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." (KJV) Jesus is saying that flesh can only produce itself as flesh. The law of reproduction said "after its kind." So likewise, the Spirit produces spirit, a life born, nurtured, and matured by the Spirit of God.

In verse 13, Jesus says, "And no one has ascended into heaven, but He who descended from heaven, even the Son of Man. (NASB) Here Jesus is affirming that He came from heaven. Then in verses 14-15, Jesus points to His crucifixion and the necessity of being lifted up, so we as sinners would have hope of eternal life. People are looking for life, for that which makes their existence meaningful. Jesus offers the truest form of life-eternal life to those who believe in Him. "In Him is life and the life is the light of men." (John 1:4).

John 3:16 is probably the most beloved verse in the Bible. It is one of the first verses memorized by children. "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life." (KJV) It is an eternal fact that God loves you with an everlasting love that cannot be fathomed; it is so boundless that it can only be known by faith. The little word "so" is most expressive in this verse, it gives us some concept of the magnitude of God's love. God so loves us, that He gave His only begotten (unique, one of a kind) Son to be made sin: for us that we might be made that which God loves; righteousness. The breadth of the divine love is emphasized in that its object is the whole world. "For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved."

He that believeth on Him is not condemned: but he that believeth not on Him is condemned already, because he has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. Verse 18 (KJV) There is little doubt that Nicodemus became a true disciple. (John 7:50-52; John 19:39) What about you? Have you been born again; born from above? If you haven't, I pray you will by faith, believe that Jesus Christ is the savior of the world, repent and confess your sins, for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. Ask God to cleanse your heart and give you new life in Him, for in Him and Him alone can we be born again.

Lofton is a member of Willow Grove Church, Collins.

EXPLORE THE BIBLE

When Service is Risky

Esther 3:1-4:17

By Tim Alexander

I just recently went on a mission trip to Honduras, Central America. I was on a medical, dental, evangelistic, construction mission trip. This was my fifth trip to this beautiful Country that is so poverty stricken. Although our lives were not in danger, many missionaries in foreign lands are on the front lines, in the trenches of ministry where their lives are on the line. Risk is part of the job of every missionary. Risk is part of life that is unavoidable. Someone once told me, "Accept life as a challenge, not a threat." Queen Esther found herself in a challenging dilemma; to speak or not to speak to the king regarding an important issue. She made the right decision but it was at a great risk.

1. Following God Includes Loyalty, (Esther 3:2, 5-6)

King Xerxes promoted Haman giving him a seat of honor above other nobles. Haman was an Agagite, a descendant of the Amalekite King Agag. The Amalekites, from the land of Canaan, had persistently opposed the Jews. After Haman had been elevated to his new status, the royal staff was ordered to bow down to Haman. The Bible does not clearly state why Mordecai refused. Two possible reasons do exist. First to a Jew, bowing down to a person is a form of idolatry. Second, Mordecai knew that Haman's ancestors feverishly opposed the Jews and he probably knew Haman would also be a "thorn in the flesh" to the Jews as well.

Alexander

When Haman discovered that Mordecai did not bow down to him, Haman was filled with rage. Revenge for Haman meant a plan to kill all the Jews in King Xerxes' kingdom. Mordecai was not the only person in the Bible who refused to bow down. The three Hebrew children did not bow down to Nebuchadnezzar's golden image. Nebuchadnezzar acted like Haman, except he aimed his anger at the three young men. As you will see, God protected the three Hebrew children as well as He did Mordecai.

2. Following God Includes Understanding, (Esther 4:5,8-9)

Approximately fifteen million Jewish lives in the Persian Empire were on the line because of Haman's anger and the King's stupidity. All of these Jews were destined to an early death, unless something was done. Since the Persian Empire stretched from India to Ethiopia there was no place to run and hide.

Mordecai learned about the plan to slaughter the Jews. He put on the traditional mourning clothing of sackcloth and ashes. Jews around the empire grieved about the upcoming disaster. They fasted, prayed and wept and asked God to change the king's decree.

After hearing about Mordecai's plight, Queen Ester sent some clean cloths to Mordecai through her servant. Mordecai, at that time, told the queen's servant of Haman's evil plot to kill the Jews. Mordecai actually had a copy of the edict to give to the queen's servant.

3. Following God May Include Risk, (Esther 4:10-16)

The Queen was in a difficult situation. She wanted to help Mordecai, but she also knew that going to see the king without an invitation or summons was breaking the law, and she could be put to death. The only exception to that law is if the King extends the gold scepter to her and spares her life. Through another conversation with the queen's servant,

Mordecai reminds Esther that she was in this royal position "for such a time as this."

Esther did not talk to Mordecai directly, but she knew she could not remain silent. Esther made up her mind to talk to the king after much fasting and prayer. She said "if I perish, I perish." What a risky decision Esther had made. Esther was willing to risk her own life to save the lives of others, talk about the ultimate sacrifice. If you were Esther, would you speak out or remain silent? Esther had confidence in a Holy God who would protect her, one way or another.

God always accomplishes his purposes through people. God is also in the business of protecting his people from harm or walking people through the "valley and shadow of death." As God used Esther may He use our voices to be His instruments of peace, to bring life and light to this dark world.

Alexander is Minister of Education, Harrisburg Church, Tupelo.

MISSISSIPPI BAPTIST FOUNDATION Scholarship Ministry

The apostle Paul expressed confidence in his Lord when he declared, "And my God shall supply all your needs according to His riches in glory in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:19). This well-known verse highlights the focus of the Mississippi Baptist Foundation's Scholarship Ministry.

Due to the generosity of many faithful Christian stewards, the Foundation has the privilege of providing needs-based supplemental financial assistance to Mississippi students who are pursuing a degree at a Mississippi Baptist college or a Southern Baptist seminary. Most of these endowed scholarship accounts offer specific eligibility guidelines for awarding a scholarship grant. Factors such as field of study, institution attended, and scholarship amount often are included as stipulated criteria for award consideration.

For more information about the Mississippi Baptist Foundation Scholarship Ministry, please contact our office at PO Box 530, Jackson, MS 39205, telephone us at (601) 292-3210 or (800) 748-1651, or visit our website, www.msbaftsfoundation.org. A completed application must be received in the MBF office by April 30.
